

Boutique Law Firm Proactively Identifies Cyber Threats

Wolfson Bolton Kochis PLLC is a premier boutique business law firm based in Troy, Michigan, renowned for delivering high-quality legal services with a steadfast commitment to client success. Celebrating over 15 years of excellence, the firm specializes in areas including restructuring and bankruptcy, automotive supply chain matters, litigation, corporate counseling, and real estate.

The Problem

Like any other company, the firm had concerns about the cyber criminals gaining access to client data. They wanted a managed service to monitor external, internet-facing resources for evolving cyber risks and identify security gaps.

The goal was simple...stop malicious attackers from gaining access to company resources. The challenge they faced was just like many other law firms its size looking to protect their business – most cyber security offerings are built for enterprise size clients, which means they are too costly and complex to meet the needs of boutique firms such as theirs.

The Solution

TARA Cyber Threat Analytics (CTA) is purpose built to meet the needs of Small and Medium Businesses (SMBs). It uses dark-web threat intelligence and A/I to monitor internet-facing resources and proactively alert organizations to evolving cyber risks.

The simple, easy to use dashboard displays green (no issues) and red (issues identified) indicators across key cyber risk categories and allows organizations to track resolution of identified issues. The platform complements internal-facing cyber solutions offered by IT service providers that predominantly serve the SMB market.

Problem Solved

Working closely with their IT service provider, the team at Wolfson Bolton Kochis successfully implemented CTA and continues to rely on CTA to protect the organization against evolving cyber risks.

“Our clients count on us to keep their data confidential, and we were concerned about unknown cyber risks that could compromise that data. Most cyber security technologies are geared toward large firms. TARA CTA offered an effective, simple to use approach that met both our functional and financial requirements. I feel good knowing that it has us covered. We would recommend CTA to any law firm that is concerned about protecting client data.”
